

THE Sun

CHAP ON LOOKOUT FOR GIRL

BRITAIN'S Got Talent finalist DALISO CHAPONDA reckons his comedy tour is the perfect way to find a girlfriend.

The Malawi-born comic, who came third in this year's series, will be taking his show, called What The African Said, around the UK next year.

And he hopes to meet a like-minded woman on his travels.

In an exclusive interview Daliso, above, said: "Maybe my tour should be called African Looking For Love. A woman has to be hilarious for me to date her. Not only do I need her to laugh at my jokes, but she has to make me laugh too."

Daliso's career sky-rocketed after he impressed the BGT judges and he has already landed his own Radio 4 series.

He said: "I pitched the show to producers, who were just going to give me one pilot and see what the reaction was.

"But after they saw I was funny on telly they offered me the whole series. BGT has opened all the doors for me."

Before female admirers get too excited, the role should come with a warning. He added: "If you become my girlfriend you will be mocked in my set."

Any successful candidate should insist on getting a cut of the takings.